POINTS OF INTEREST:

Georgetown/PSIEC South Seattle Community College's Georgetown Campus and Puget Sound Industrial Excellence Center (PSIEC) have forged strategic partnerships with business, labor, government, industry and the community to meet workforce needs. The Georgetown Campus leads in the creation of green jobs training programs, including new opportunities for disadvantaged youth and adults to receive industry-valued training that can advance their prospects for successful careers in construction and manufacturing. More than 2,100 apprentices in over 20 different trades – 25% of the state's total – are trained at Georgetown each year.

BAS in Hospitality Management South's Bachelor of Applied Science (BAS) program was among the first four BAS programs offered by Washington state community colleges. Demand for the program continues to increase and enrollment has doubled; this fall, a second 25-student cohort will be added. Students admitted to the program come from 15 colleges and universities from throughout the United States. In its first two years, the program has achieved an 89% completion rate, with a 92% job placement rate.

Diversity Our student body reflects the diversity of our service area. South is located in one of the most diverse zip codes in the nation and is bordered by a cluster of neighborhoods that form one of the lowest income areas in the Pacific Northwest. More than 35 first languages are spoken on campus and the college is now the 2nd most diverse community college in the state. Asian Pacific Islanders (API) comprise 25% of the student population and, in 2008, the college was designated one of the first six Asian American, Native American, Pacific Islander Serving Institutions (AANAPISI) in the U.S.
